AWARDS

1989 2nd Prize Silver Medal "Silp Bhirasri" Contemporary Art by young artists

An abstract painting by Mark Rothko, titled 'Untitled (Red, Yellow, and Blue)'. The artwork consists of several horizontal bands of color. At the top is a dark, almost black band. Below this is a thin, bright yellow band, followed by a thin blue band. The next band is a thick, vibrant red. Below the red is a thin, light-colored band, possibly white or very light yellow. This is followed by another thin blue band. The bottom section of the painting is a large, dark, textured area, possibly black or very dark blue, with some lighter, greyish-blue tones visible. The overall effect is one of layered, horizontal stripes of color, with a strong contrast between the dark and light areas. The texture of the paint is visible, suggesting a thick application.
